No Mystery

There's no mystery in good paint making. It's only "cheap" and inferior paint that surrounds itself with secrecy and mystery.

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT

is not a "patent" or "chemical" paint. There's no secret or mystery about it. It's a pure lead, pure zinc, and pure linseed oil paint. It's better than other paints made from the same materials, because the methods and manufacturing facilities of its makers are better—not because they have any patent or secret scheme.

Y. M. C. A. Campaigns For U. S. Soldiers

Every city and rural district in California will be included in a ten-day campaign for $125,000 which the Y. M. C. A. will conduct, beginning May 21, the proceeds of which are to be used to promote a program of social service, athletics, religious meetings, entertainments and educational classes for the soldier boys of this state. The Y. M. C. A. work for the soldiers also will include providing them with places to write letters home, tons of stationery, good books, magazines, motion pictures and all sorts of games and amusements.

According to the plans for the work, announced by the War Work Council, which is at the head of raising the funds in this state, there will be five Y. M. C. A. secretaries with each brigade of 5,000 men. One will be a general secretary, another a religious work director, a third, a physical director and two assistants, one of whom will operate the picture machine.

The California movement is part of a national effort by the Y. M. C. A. to mobilize 1,000 of its trained secretaries for war and to raise $3,000,000 with which to build and equip at least 300 Y. M. C. A. buildings for the enlisted men.

W. C. T. U. Notes

The lovely home of Mrs. Clara Gilman was never more charming than as a setting for the Parlor Meeting on Wednesday, May 2nd, 1917.

Helpful devotional services were led by Mrs. George Ash. During the business hour a number of important items were dispatched. Among them the work for Soldiers and Sailors etc. under the direction of Miss Marie Vandergon, a valued member and professional nurse; to prepare jams and jellies; to write letters of cheer to "our boys in blue" accompanying the gifts.

A petition, urging the refusal of a saloon license to a keeper guilty of selling liquor to minors, was signed by every one present, the petition also to be circulated among country people who do shopping in Santa Clara. The topic of the p. m. was "Child Training a Problem of Parent Training." The following program was rendered. "Sympathy and Happiness the Right of every Child," by Mrs. Ethel Davis. "The Mistakes some Mothers Make," Mrs. Clara Gilman, and "How unselfish Mothers sometimes encourage selfishness in their Children," Mrs. Clara Baldwin.

Interspersed were delightful songs by Maryd and Emma May Powell, and Mrs. A. I. Cramer. Mrs. Powell spoke tenderly of the beautiful unselfishness of the White Ribbon leaders, giving reminiscences of associations with Mrs. Annie K. Bidwell whose life and character is held in lofty esteem. Mrs. Powell spoke touchingly of one in Campbell Union who holds the same high place, Mrs. Mae M. Whitman, whose devotion to temperance and humanity is known, not only in this locality, but thru' out distant states, having been Superintendent of Temperance and Labor for nine years in the National W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Powell then gracefully presented a box containing a beautiful love-gift. Taken completely by surprise Mrs. Whitman said she felt like echoing the words of a certain darkey mammy, when a recipient of gifts and praise, "Am I, Am I? Or hab de angels got me? I believe de angels hab got me suah."

Mrs. Whitman assured the donors that their gift was highly appreciated and would always be a valued reminder of their love and confidence.

Mrs. Baldwin followed with some original lines an affectionate tribute to Mrs. Whitman, and then came elegant bouquets of roses, sweet peas and other flowers, a whole clothes basket full of them: one by one were brought forward and presented by the sweet little flower girls, Maryd and Emma May.

Delicious refreshments were daintily served by the hostess and her committee during the social hour that followed. LUELLA CALDWELL.

A TRIBUTE, TO M. M. W.

By C. B. B. in behalf of Campbell W. C. T. U.

We meet today to honor her,
The one that we love best,
Who has toiled for Campbell Union
With a never failing zest.

Her life is an inspiration
To all her sisters here
To do our level best
In the work we hold so dear.

She is ever one of the faithful
And labors with all her heart.
In putting the white spots on the map
She has done a giant's part.

Campbell union is proud of her,
And we are happy to say
We are her humble co-workers
In the temperance cause today.

Hail to our gracious lady
In whom we all delight!
'Tis the work of such as she
That is making the map pure white.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Turner and Mrs. Taxiera visited their friend, Mrs. E. C. Merrill last week. Mrs. Turner also attended an alumni meeting at Almaden.

Eric Bydekarken, Gilmore Duncan, Edgar Kennedy, Oliver Price and Lloyd Richards spent the week-end in the Big Basin fishing. Some luck and some time, believe me.

The many friends of Mrs. G. W. Snyder, who recently sustained a painful laceration on the right forearm as the result of a fall, will be pleased to hear that she is rapidly improving.

Mrs. Roy Thompson arrived last week from the south for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Crow. Roy is with one of the battleships but all mail being censored even his wife doesn't know where he is.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Burgess of Chicago were visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Bangs and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Love of Cupertino last week. Mr. Burgess is paymaster for the Chicago-Northwestern railroad and they were old neighbors when Mr. Bangs was passenger conductor on the Chicago Milwaukee road.

Mrs. Porter's Fruit Pudding—2 cans for 25c.

This fruit pudding cannot fail to please the most fastidious taste. You know that a good fruit pudding is rather difficult to make. A homemade pudding of this sort is considered a luxury to be seldom indulged in except on "state" occasions. But Mrs. Porter's Fruit Pudding is inexpensive; it will be a welcome change for your own family, and makes a dainty "special" when you are entertaining a friend or two. Serve the pudding with any good sauce.

Peanut Butter in Bulk—20c a pound.

Customer's are daily commending the quality of this bulk peanut butter—the demand for it would surprise you. For school lunches it is always welcome; for a picnic lunch or a fishing trip it is just the thing. This grade of nut butter is not to be confused with the cheaper kinds sold by stores that do not cater to first-class trade.

Marten's Eastern Cheese—30c a pound.

It will interest you to learn that this grade of cheese is now 32c a pound wholesale, and difficult to get at that price. Our stock is the balance of a contract that was placed long ago, before prices began to exceed the speed limit. Of course this cheese is sharp; it is relished by folks who like something with "pep". But even those people who lack the moral courage to eat such cheese raw will appreciate its flavor when cooked with macaroni or spaghetti.

ANIMAL WORLD LAW

How Dumb Brutes Punish Their Criminals Is Shown.

Observer Tells Interesting Stories of Cases Where Swift Punishment Has Been Meted Out to Offenders.

The punishment that birds and animals mete out to their criminals and the court and legal proceedings connected with it furnish an interesting field of study.

An interesting example of an animal trial is furnished by an observer. A little dog had, for no apparent reason, been mistreated by a larger bulldog. At once the little fellow scoured the neighborhood and collected all the bones he could find, burying them in the cellar of a house. When he had succeeded in securing a sufficient number he issued invitations to all the canines in the neighborhood, the bulldog alone excepted.

The guests came from all directions, the halt, the lame and the hungry. When justice had been done to the banquet the host arose and made an eloquent after-dinner speech, in which he laid before the assembled company his case. They heard him through, then declared the offending and absent bulldog to be guilty and at once proceeded in a body to carry out the sentence of chastisement.

It is said that a stork, whose morals were sadly out of repair, once appropriated to himself the companion of a neighbor. The injured lady, with great dispatch, called together the storks of the district. He was found guilty and sentenced, and the court, immediately turning executioner, fell upon him and tore him to pieces.

A similar scene, quite common among rooks, is described by an ornithologist. The culprit, brave and jaunty, stood surrounded by forty or fifty of his indignant mates. As the trial progressed the accused little by little lost his jaunty air and hung his head in humiliation. When the sentence had been pronounced the court at once fell to and pecked him to death.

It is quite common in early spring for young and inexperienced sparrows to steal twigs and other building material from the nests of their elders. If this theft is detected, as it usually is, a posse promptly visits the offender's nest and scatters it to the four winds, soundly thrashing the occupant in the bargain.

A story is told of a sparrow who had stolen the nest of a martin, and was making himself comfortable in it. The angry owner summoned all his friends and immediately they came, several hundred strong but the intruder held them at bay for some time by pecking at all who came near enough to the opening. Finally the avengers withdrew and held a consultation. In a few moments they returned, each with a mouthful of mud, and proceeded to plaster up the hole, walling the occupant up alive.

The story is told that a French surgeon, wishing to procure a stork, but being unable to do so, stole some eggs from a nest and substituted hen's eggs. The innocent female hatched them out, but the male, angry at the strange appearance of his offspring, went away. Three or four days later he reappeared, accompanied by several others, who formed a circle about him while he argued his case. The jury without retreating brought in a verdict of "guilty," and the poor, innocent mother was executed.

Believed in Preparedness.

Mrs. Jenkins had missed Mrs. Brady from her accustomed haunts, and hearing several startling rumors concerning her went in search of her old friend.

"They tell me you're workin' 'ard night an' day, Sarah Ann," she began. "Yes," returned Mrs. Brady. "I'm under bonds to keep the peace for pullin' the whiskers out of that old scoundrel of a 'ushan' o' mine, an' the magistrate said if I come afore 'im ag'in, or laid me 'ands on the old man, 'e'd fine me 50 shillin'."

"An' so ye're workin' 'ard to keep out of mischief?"

"I'm what? Not much! I'm workin' 'ard to save up the fine!"

Germany Uses Zinc Wire.

In order to save as much as possible of her copper and iron, Germany has developed the zinc wire. She is now using it for ordinary electric wiring at home and for telephone work at the front, according to the Popular Science Monthly. Considerable trouble was experienced, however, in perfecting the various stages of manufacture. The process of drawing the wire was especially difficult. But after innumerable experiments success was attained. The new wire has been found to have double the conductivity of iron wire.

THE COLD LAND OF FIRE

MOUNT DARWIN

TIERRA DEL FUELO (Land of Ice) they should have named it, those old Spanish navigators who were the first Europeans to see that cold southland. Perhaps they would have called it that had not the Yaghans had the habit of communicating with one another by means of signal fires.

We can imagine what a stir was created among the aboriginal inhabitants of the Fuegian archipelago when they first beheld a full-rigged ship with its great white sails gliding into their horizon from realms they knew not of, says Edward Albes in the Bulletin of the Pan-American Union.

The first to see it doubtless grew alarmed. They hastened to build a fire on some high point to signal others of their kind. There was hurrying and scurrying toward the sentinels—other signal fires were kindled—from point to point the news was flashed by fires at night and smoke by day—an important thing had happened; and fire was the wireless telegraphy of the Fuegians. Yaghans signaled to Yaghans; the Onas saw the fires and they, too, became alarmed and started their fires. They were farther inland, were hunters, and roamed the forests and grass-covered prairies and were many. Even the other canoe Indians, the Alaculofs, doubtless saw the fires and wondered what could the matter be. To the navigating Spaniards these pyrotechnics were also a source of wonder. The whole land seemed to be dotted with blazing fires, so "Tierra del Fuego" seemed to them a most appropriate name—and "Land of Fire" it has been since in every tongue of the civilized world, notwithstanding that it is preeminently the reverse.

Cold, But Beautiful.

Cold—but in parts beautiful beyond comparison. Naturally one's opinion of a city or section of country visited is often colored by his first impressions. These impressions in the case of the writer may have been unusually favorable, owing perhaps to the season of the year and the exceptionally fine weather when he viewed this out-of-the-way corner of the world. At any rate, he will never forget the scenic wonders encountered on a trip through the Strait of Magellan, and especially of that section of the Fuegian archipelago which borders on Magdalen sound, an arm of the strait which stretches almost directly south from the elbow formed by Cape Froward, the southernmost tip of the South American mainland.

It was during the first days of April—early autumn in the southern regions of South America—when we steamed into the Strait of Magellan at its Pacific end. We were en route to Punta Arenas, and the captain of the vessel had kindly consented to give us a near view of famed Mount Sarmiento, which meant a detour of some seventy miles, down into Magdalen sound. It is just where the sound and Cockburn channel meet at almost a right angle that this ice-clad eminence known as the "Mountain King of the Southernmost Andes" dominates a scene of marvelous beauty.

We had passed between Clarence island on the western and Dawson island on the eastern side of the sound when we finally floated into what appeared to be a landlocked bay. All about us were cliffs and crags and snow-covered peaks and there, just at the southeast corner of the bay, standing like a glistening monument whose cap was hidden in the circling wreaths of vapor and of cloud, we saw Sarmiento.

ISLAND IN THE RIO LOPEZ

of the prairie sections, as after leaving Punta Arenas we steamed through the second and first narrows within pistol shot of the land. This section of the island, while less picturesque than that contiguous to Magdalen sound, is of much greater utility, for it is here that the large sheep ranches are to be found.

Scanty Resources of Archipelago.

The physical environment of a race of people has much to do with its development, mentally as well as physically, in the course of centuries of existence. Climate, character of the land, resources offered in the matter of food, shelter, etc., all are important factors which either retard or hasten the development of the intellect and often modify even the structure of the body. Bearing this in mind, it is not at all astonishing that the Fuegian tribes had reached but a comparatively low stage in the process of their evolution. Especially is this true of the Yaghans and the Alaculofs. The islands of the archipelago in which they had lived for many generations offered but scanty resources, while the climate was certainly far from ideal. These islands are for the most part the tops of mountains that project above the surface of the sea. According to one writer: "As one sails among them the idea that there is a mountain chain that at some time long past was suddenly submerged in the sea is irresistible. For miles and leagues one may coast along without finding a beach wide enough to furnish a foothold, not to mention a place for hauling up a yawl. That the mountain is as precipitous below the water as it is above is easily proved, for soundings with the deep-sea lead line often given 60 to 100 fathoms within 100 feet of the shore line."

Magnificence of Sarmiento. The vessel's engines were stopped, and we drifted close to the foot of

CITIES' ODD NAMES

Few National Capitals Are Called After Noted Citizens.

Many Municipalities in United States Commemorate Famous Men of History, But Not Many of Them Are Americans.

There used to be a saying that to reach the heights of fame a man must have a street, a town and a cigar named after him. But it is an odd fact that while many men achieve such greatness, there are only one or two who have had the capitals of nations named for them.

There is, of course, Washington, named after the first president; Petrograd, named for its founder, Peter the Great, and Constantinople, named for the great Constantine; but beyond these the capitals of the various countries have received their names by reason of their climate, their geographic position or some touch of sentiment, a writer in the Philadelphia North American observes.

Changing the name of the capital has been frequently done. Indeed it was only with the beginning of the present war that St. Petersburg became Petrograd, eliminating the German "burg," whose choosing has always been a mystery to the Russian people.

Tokyo, the capital of Japan, has also had its name changed, for less than fifty years ago it was known as "Yeddo," a Japanese word meaning estuary gate. When the mikado took up his residence there, however, he changed the name to Tokyo, meaning eastern capital, thus differentiating it from the former capital, which had been called Saito, or western capital.

Another capital which has been rechristened within recent years is Christiania, the capital of Norway, which derives its name from King Christian IV, who built the now-famous city after the destruction by fire of the old capital Oslo. It was his desire to make it the most modern and most beautiful of cities, and he took so great a personal interest in it that when it came to a name everyone urged that it be called for him, and Christiania was finally adopted as being more artistic than Christianville or burg.

There are very few great cities of the United States named for Americans, but there are many which commemorate famous men of history. Of those named for Americans, there are, among others, Jefferson City, Mo.; Madison, Wis.; Lincoln, Neb.; and Houston, Tex., while there are also many cities which tell in their names the stories of gallant priests who started missions among the Indians, and were often the first white men to penetrate into the depths of the wilderness. San Francisco is named, it is true, for St. Francis, but the monks of that order are really the ones whose deeds the city commemorates; and there are, besides, Hennepin, Minn., and Marquette, Wis., whose names tell mute stories of the priests. The majority of the larger cities are, however, named for Englishmen or Frenchmen, for when the cities received their christening no one dreamed that the time would come when the vast new country would be a nation of itself. Thus New York was named for the duke of York, St. Louis for the king of France, Pittsburgh for Lord Pitt, Baltimore for Lord Baltimore, New Orleans for the duke of Orleans, and so on through a long list of names that have now become most thoroughly Americanized in the thoughts of the whole world.

In Australia the habit of naming cities after statesmen is more prevalent than in any other country, and the majority of its larger towns bring to mind men who have helped to make history. Thus Melbourne recalls Lord Melbourne; Sydney was named after Thomas Townsend, first viscount Sydney, and at that time secretary of state for the colonies, and Adelaide, another of Australia's capital cities, keeps green the memory of Queen Adelaide, wife of William IV.

Beware Nap After Dinner.

Gouffon, a French physician, has discovered that the desire of many people to go quickly to sleep after eating is likely to indicate indigestion and dyspepsia. He cites a number of cases in which people have been seized by an unconquerable desire to sleep even after a light meal. Thin people are much more likely to hunt a sofa after dinner than fat people, since their thinness is likely to indicate improper digestion, which also makes them sleepy.

House Flies Short-Lived.

The average life of 3,000 caged house flies has been found by R. H. Hutchinson and others to be slightly more than ten days, the greatest age noted having been seventy days. Egg laying usually begins in four or five days after the emergence of the adult fly, but sometime in two and one-half days. This period is greatly influenced by temperature, but also by humidity and the kind and quality of the food of both larvae and adults.

Conjugal Foresight.

A famous physician, asked at the New York Academy of Medicine why he wore rubbers on a day when the streets were perfectly dry, replied:

"My wife runs down the street after me with them when I don't. I wear them to keep her from getting pneumonia."

Famous California Trees

ONE of the first impressions the visitor receives when he enters California is the wide variety of palms to be found everywhere. You see them in the gardens of rich and poor, along the city streets and country lanes, in park conservatories, in private homes, in the theaters, the hotel lobbies, the shop windows.

Your interest is aroused and then you begin asking questions. You soon get so that you can pick out the most popular varieties and then you learn their history and origin, for palms from every section of the world grow in California.

From a historical standpoint, the most unusual palm tree in the state stands at the foot of the Presidio Hill, in San Diego. It was planted by Father Junipero Serra, who brought European civilization into California in 1769, and it is said that the only time the seedling bore fruit was in 1869, probably in honor of its one-hundredth anniversary.

For years, a group of these tall palms stood on this spot, much scarred and neglected. In April, 1887, a fence was built to protect them from further desecration. Six years later, one of them was taken up and displayed in the glass horticultural building of the Chicago Columbian exposition. It did not live long, however, probably because it suffered from the long journey across the continent or missed the salt breeze it had enjoyed for a century and a quarter.

Old Landmark Preserved.

Several years ago, a severe windstorm badly damaged another of these veteran sentinels and it, too, succumbed, leaving but one of the group standing. This impressed the authorities with the necessity of protecting this old landmark and so it has been braced and taken care of, and as a result it bids fair to live for many years.

But this reminder of California's mission days is not by any means the oldest or tallest palm in California. In Riverside county is Palm Canyon, located in the dry, barren hills forming the eastern slope of Mt. San Jacinto. There may be found thousands of native fan palms, many of them over a hundred feet tall, that are estimated by scientists to have been standing the famous landscape gardener, who has made Golden Gate Park, in San Francisco, one of the beauty spots of the world. His crowning achievement at the Panama-Pacific International exposition was the stately Avenue of Palms which he built by transplanting palms (soil, roots and all) from gardens in many near-by bay cities.

For half a mile, the avenue was bordered by a double row of California fan palms and Canary island date palms, ranging in height from 18 to 25 feet. They were festooned with vines, and blossoming nasturtiums and geraniums and ferns were planted in the interstices of the roughened trunks and looked as if they had been there all ways. Some of the palms were 15 years old, and since the close of the great fair they have again been transplanted to permanent locations along the roadways in the Presidio, Uncle Sam's great military reservation.

One of the most remarkable collections of outdoor palms in California is to be found in the Gillespie garden at Santa Barbara. Mr. Gillespie is an enthusiastic collector. He has searched the deserts of Africa, the mountains of Mexico and the islands of the sea to add new specimens to his collection.

Extensive Variety of Trees.

During a recent visit, I was told that more than 200 varieties have been planted in the extensive Persian garden. One of the most interesting trees to an enthusiast is a Guadalupe palm, a native of the island of Guadalupe, some 250 miles south of San Diego. In a sheltered corner, I saw a grand specimen of the Areca sapida from far-away New Zealand. Dwarfed Chamaecyparis humilis, from the Mediterranean region, contrasted strongly with the stately Chamaecyparis excelsa, from China. On the terraced hillside, I noted the Jubaea spectabilis, or Wine Palm of Chile; the Erythea armata, commonly called the Blue Palm, a native of Lower California; the Sabal Palmetto, or Cabbage Palm of Florida; and even the Seaforthia, from Australia, one of the most elegant of the palm family.

But the most striking of all is the double row of feathery Cocos plumosa, natives of Southern Brazil, and the wide-spreading Phoenix canariensis that border the impressive roadway

MAGNOLIA AVENUE, RIVERSIDE

when Columbus discovered America.

Dr. Wellwood Murray visited this unusual canyon about thirty years ago, and upon viewing these wonderful trees, was at once struck with the possibilities of using them for ornamental purposes. He gathered their seeds, shipped them to seedmen throughout the country, also to Europe, and today there are hundreds of thousands of these palms.

Visitors used to dig up the young palms and carry them away to adorn their gardens, but this was stopped about fifteen years ago, when this remarkable canyon and several minor palm groves immediately adjacent were set aside as a national reserve.

Visitors to Los Angeles marvel at the slender, towering palms that are to be found in private gardens. Some are still hale and hardy that were planted shortly after the founding of the pueblo in 1781. Many of them rise to a height of 100 feet and it is surprising how they weather the strong winter winds without being snapped in two or blown down, for their roots are neither deep nor wide-spreading. These palms belong to another species, native to Lower California, but those of lower growth and far greater girth are true Californians.

Pride of Los Angeles.

The two oldest trees in Los Angeles stood near the River station of the Southern Pacific and when the railroad company decided to use the land for building purposes, they allowed a wide-awake real estate dealer to move the palms to a new subdivision near Santa Monica. The experiment was watched with great interest. Unfortunately, as they were being raised from the wagon on which they were being transported, the tackle parted and the veterans were broken.

The most notable and successful example of moving old palms, however, was accomplished by John McLaren, leading to Mr. Gillespie's Italian villa, which is surrounded by the most unusual water garden in California.

Resembling Marching Regiment.

Thousands of these ornamental palms are used to advantage on the Hope ranch, on the outskirts of Santa Barbara. From an elevation we first beheld them in great numbers flanking the winding roadway in the valley below. They reminded me of a regiment of erect soldiers marching with precision, two abreast, carrying huge umbrellas over their heads to protect them from the intense heat. And as we watched them from a speeding automobile, there was the added optical illusion, owing to the angle from which we saw them and the regularity with which they had been planted in double rows, of the trees actually moving with long strides out of the valley and disappearing over the rolling hills.

The city of Fresno boasts a palm-lined avenue that is without doubt one of the finest in the state, not excepting the famous Magnolia avenue of Riverside. It was graded, planted and improved in 1892 by the late Theodore Kearny at his own expense and deeded to the county. Think of a smooth, dead-level road eleven miles long, 140 feet wide, bordered on both sides with fan palms, oleanders, eucalypti and pampas grass! The roadway runs through beautiful stretches of vineyards and fruit trees, and in places, along the grain fields, are masses of California's state flower, the poppy, of such vivid golden coloring as to suggest a flow of fiery lava in a sea of emerald.

Criminal Carelessness.

"What brought you here, my poor man?" asked the prison visitor.

"Just a little bit of absent-mindedness," replied the prisoner.

"How was that?"

"I forgot to scratch the monogram off a watch before I pawned it."

How to Save

For the young man who thinks it a manly thing to spend money freely, and who sneers at the thrifty person as "stingy" and "mean," here are a few facts that he may digest with profit:

Sixty-five of every 100 persons dying in this country have absolutely no estate; they die penniless.
Of the remaining 34 persons, 25 never accumulate more than $1,300 in their lifetime, and die with less than that. Only 9 persons in 100 have more than $5,000 when they die.

Only 2 per cent of the whole population may be classed as "well-to-do." The other 98 per cent of the people of this country have only their wages from day to day, or are dependent upon charity.
Of every hundred persons who reach the age of 65, no fewer than 97 are partly or wholly dependent upon relatives, friends or charity for food, clothing or shelter.

These figures are not mere estimates. They are taken from the government census statistics and are arranged and given out by the president of the American Society for Thrift, a society organized by some representative business men who see a real danger to our nation in the American tendency to wastefulness.

It will be seen from these figures that thrift is a virtue that needs to be taught to young people. The boy who squanders his youth in riotous living, expecting chance or luck to bring him a fortune later in life, should scan these figures and learn that he has just 9 chances in 100 to ever accumulate $5,000 or more, and if he is to be one of the fortunate ones he must begin early to save.—Kansas City Star.

Your Flag and My Flag

Your flag and my flag
And how it floats today
O'er your land and my land,
And half the world away.

Blood-red and rose-red,
Its stripes forever gleam;
Snow-white and soul white,
The good forefathers' dream.

Sky blue and true blue,
With stars that gleam aright:
A gloried guidon of the day,
A shelter through the night.

Your flag and my flag
Oh, how much it holds!
Your heart and my heart
Safe within its folds.

You heart and my heart
Beat quicker at the sight;
Sun-kissed and wind-tossed,
The red and blue and white.

An Open Letter

Editor Press:

Some unpatriotic person has circulated a report among the good people of our little city and community that the big Red Cross benefit is not a benefit at all, and that those contributing toward same are being misled. It makes no difference how much effort one puts forth toward making a good thing a success it seems that there is always some one displeased. A report of this kind simply infers that the management of the Red Cross Society is crooked; that the Native Sons of the Golden West are not sincere, and that I personally will profit.
As you have already mentioned in your columns, if any one feels that attending a Sunday ball game is wrong, no one asks them to change their ideas. Because it is a Sunday ball game does not make it a fact that it is not a benefit. We have no assurance from the enemy that he will rest his arms on Sunday, and it does not seem right that a man wounded on Saturday should have no care on Sunday.
The Red Cross works every day, and this benefit ball game is being staged on a Sunday by a red-blooded crowd of Americans who have no other day to set aside for such a demonstration of their respect for the Red Cross, and who were "raised to be soldiers".

I personally know who is running this benefit. They are all good, honest, upright business men, and no man can conscientiously criticize such a movement, regardless of the day, when it is to help so honorable and noble a cause.

Yours truly
G. C. BRADFORD.

H. S. Board Banqueted

A very delightful function was given at the High school Saturday when the faculty with the valued assistance of the Domestic science classes, served luncheon with the High school trustees as guests. The occasion was the annual meeting of the Board, from which Joseph Rohmet was retiring after many years of faithful service. He was presented with a pretty bouquet as a slight token of appreciation and one was sent to R. K.
Thomas who was unable to attend.

The floral decorations which had been arranged by Miss Johnson were baskets of small old fashioned flowers. The place cards and nut cups were the work of the art classes under Miss Johnson's direction, the former representing miniature old fashioned slates upon which pictures designated different members of the faculty, while the trustees were named. The favors for the saluted nuts were little pails fashioned of silver paper.

The dinner was prepared and served entirely by the cooking classes under the supervision of Miss Sprecker, and has elicited many commendatory remarks from all who were privileged to partake.

The menu follows:

Fruit Cocktail
Roast Veal	Mashed potatoes
Brown Gravy
Creamed peas and carrots in timbales
Napkin Rolls
Tomato Jelly Salad	Salad Crackers
Pine Apple Sherbert
Hermits
Salted Nuts	Coffee

At the business meeting the Board organized, electing R. K. Thomas, president; M. A. Ross, vice-president, J. F.
Duncan, clerk. F. K. Bartholomew and the newly elected member, A. B. Townsend, complete the personnel of the Board.

Grangers Growers

At the meeting of Orchard City Grange Tuesday evening the question of larger what we already have discussed during the lecture hour. A review of the story in the Post "Wherewith shall we be

An article from the National Grange

Mrs. Meda Waite.

H. G. Keesling gave a talk on what is

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was sup-failing to cure with local treatment, pro-constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh
